MUNICIPAL LOAN.

The Borough of Wages Wages having received special legal authority to borrow money for erecting of Gas Works, invite applications for a loan of £200,000 in 20,000 pounds, on security of premises and works, at 6 per cent. per annum. To be repaid by instalments, on 1st January 1890.

July 21, 1887. Wages Wages.

NEW ISSUE OF SHARES.

AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL INVESTMENT AND BUILDING COMPANY, Limited.

The rapid growth of the Company's Business has induced the Directors to issue 20,000 NEW SHARES at 7s. per share, and only 10,000 of these are required for the Sydney market. It is unnecessary that speedy application be made by those intending to take up shares.

The New Issue will increase the Paid-up Capital from £100,000 to £140,000. The Reserve Fund will be larger than that of any other Building Company in the colony, and as a consequence of the large Reserve, the cost of money to this Company will be less than to any other Building Company.

The total Receipts during the year ending December 31, 1886, amounted to £627,450 10s. 6d., and the sum of £231,713 11s. 6d. was received on deposit, larger than the amount received by any other Building Company in the colony, and in the face of the widespread depression in trade.

The fact that this Company has always paid the highest rate of interest on deposits, and at the same time carried substantial reserves every year, is a guarantee that in the future the same good results may be anticipated.

The Directors have every confidence in recommending these Shares as the soundest investment in the market.

The Form of Application, Memorandum, Prospectus, and all information, apply to American papers report that whilst the funeral of a negro was being conducted in a graveyard at Mount Pleasant, 60 miles south of Nashville, in Tennessee, a storm came on, and the crowd ran for shelter under the trees. Nine persons stood under a large oak, which the lightning struck, and killing every one instantly. It destroyed three negroes and the mother and two sisters of the girl who had been buried.

With regard to allowing the range open for practice, he said he did not think they would be able to have two afternoons a week; but he thought an arrangement might be made whereby the range could be used for practice on Saturday afternoons.

completed the right of Entwistle. It was clear that he and his wife had purchased together. Entwistle went into possession of the land in 1868, and the deed was recorded in 1869. The deed was made for sale, a portion of the money being paid, and portions of the balance being paid in installments. The specific performance would have been given by the Equity Court. Entwistle was a settler. There was a clear estate in Green; because possession was kept by him all along up to 1868. There was, it was true, a purchase by Entwistle in 1868, but it was not a purchase of material in this case. Supposing he were a mere trespasser on the land, the moment Entwistle took possession, the trespasser would be ousted because of the possession of the fee. Entwistle began to run against the rightful owner. If the fee was not the rightful for three years, still the statute would run until the fee owner took some steps to recover possession of the land. Entwistle was not a trespasser. He was a purchaser. He remained out of his possession. In his Honor's opinion, there was no vacancy at all, because the rights of the third party were not affected. Entwistle was a settler. He was a settler. He had a tenant on the land, the name of the tenant was George, who had a lease from him—clearly showing that that his Honor wrongly rejected documents tendered in evidence on behalf of the defendants, and that the jury and the plaintiff proved a documentary title to the 10 acre tract, and that the evidence showed the title to be in the plaintiff, or in any persons under whom they claim, capable of defeating such documentary title, a decree should have been entered in favor of the claim as thereby proved.

The appeal stands as per heard.

RE THOMAS HOREN.

Mr. Want, instructed by Messrs. Way and Way, appeared on behalf of Thomas Horen, a sickle-maker at Camp Creek, to move to make absolute and final a writ of habeas corpus, which was granted on the 11th August last, calling upon WILLIAM WELLS, sheriff of the county of Lincoln, to produce the said Thomas Horen, a police magistrate for the district of Wellington, and to pay the costs of the writ. It was not issued to restrain him from further proceeding upon certain orders made by him on the 22nd July last at Clifton, whereby he had committed the said Thomas Horen to prison without license contrary to the provisions of the Grant, a fisherman, in the month of July, 1870, and that the net was fished in tidal waters in such a manner as to prevent the escape of fish, contrary to the provisions of the Fisheries Act, 1865, and that the said John Hyrass was convicted by the Local Government on behalf of the Fisheries Commission. The defendants pleaded guilty in answer to the charge, and being fined by the court, the said John Hyrass fined him one hundred pounds, or 2s. 6d. costs of court, and £1 s. complainant's costs, in the alternative of one month's imprisonment, and that the said John Hyrass was ordered to pay £1 s. complainant's costs, together with the costs of court, or to be imprisoned for two months. The costs and costs were paid. The net used by the defendants was confiscated.

The Crown Princess of Prussia was not the least tastelessly attired, though neither her Royal Highness nor any of her blood are celebrated for their artistic dressings. The Queen herself (I need not remind you that the Crown Princess is the Queen's eldest daughter) never dressed in what modistes of the last mode termed "the style of the court," on the hands, but the fashions in England since the fall of the Empress of the French, but the Princess does not succeed in satisfying critical taste as regards the cutures of her daughters. The Crown Princess's dress at the State ball was a soft rich silk of mauve, with lighter shade of the same colour interspersed in the texture in delicate stripes. The bodice was partly covered with lace, soft and singing, and the skirt was of green tulle, and the apron was of white which were half hidden in the delicate folds of the same lace which decorated the bodice. Lady Hel Dumcombe's toilette is said to have excited great admiration. It was a dress of white silk tulle, falling broad pleats from the waist, with an underskirt of white satin. The pleats were attached by chains of exquisite pearls. The bodice was of white satin but the skirt was of tulle, and the apron was of white tulle, repeated in association with soft silk tulle pleating caught near the neck with pearl buttons. The ornaments were pearls, and included a lovely crescent used as a fastener of a white alginate. The Ho-

BUILDING AND CONTRACTING RISKS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir.—Will you kindly allow me to place before you the risks and losses the builders and contractors are liable to, without having the slightest power of delivering the offender over to justice, under the present constitution of the law?

A gentleman, desiring to erect a building, advertises in the Herald, for tenders for residences to be built at short distance from Sydney. I applied for the plans and specifications, and was the successful tenderer, and was engaged to erect the building. The architect, who was at the time the proprietor of the proposed buildings, signed the terms of the agreement, and entered on the execution of my contract. But after having delivered materials and labour to the amount of £500, he discovered the said proprietor to have absconded without having paid me a single cent on the amount of the work done. I also discovered that he has only paid a very small deposit to the landowner. The first mortgage of the second instalment having expired, the land reverts to the former owner, who has the power to prevent my removing any of my materials.

Neither have I the power to have the ideas of a swindler arrested. Now, in view of the above facts, I am of opinion that there is plenty of room for great changes in the law relating to the rights of employers.

It should also be made responsible for the honesty of the clients by seeing that the amount of contracts be deposited in some bank or other institution, so that only the builder or architect should have access to it on the certificate of the architect.

By your inserting the above remarks and facts of a case of hardship, some of our legislators may be induced to modify the present law.

it may be written. No sect or creed, or political party, or claim pre-eminence over another in the Republican Union. The platform laid down is broad enough for all to stand upon, and is not the least in accordance with the teaching of Christ or an Atheist, a Protestant or a freemason. It will find in rule No. 2 five good principles which all accept in advocating. Disputes as to differences of doctrine or matters of local politics will then place on a neutral platform that of the Republican Union. I hope we have now made it quite clear that no journal connected with any class or sect can have any right or title to be regarded as the organ of either church or denomination.

The Spectator says:—The Pope, through his Secretary of State, Cardinal Rampolla, has addressed the following message to the President of the United States:—We desire the Temporal Power. While admitting the great evils both to the Church and to society which flow from the excommunication of nations, Italy, France, and Prussia, we deny that in any such cessation of conflict he in any way sanctions the facts actually perpetrated against the Church. "The Roman question," he says, "is not a question of power. The Pope may have complete independence and liberty, and that it may not be in the power of the Italian Government to change those conditions." That is a widely different attitude from that which we have taken. We have pointed to a guarantee by Europe of the Pope's independence and sovereignty within a defined quarter of Rome, largely enough to contain his residence and the great administrative offices of the Church, and we would not have been inconsistent with that quite possible solution.

Colonial being—differing in this respect from those who are much addicted to it as a beverage—dies hard. We thought we had got nicely over the trouble of putting an excise duty on the manufacture of it, when the Governor gave the legal order for its prohibition. We reckoned with our usual sagacity that we should get out our host, and without those astute legal minds which belong to the firm of Slattery and Heyden. We reckoned also without counsel as it would seem for it is said that one silk and three strong gowns have given joint and several and exceedingly learned opinions to the effect that the Beer Duty Act just assented to is unconstitutional. It is true, Mr. A. H. Jacob, M.L.C., it does not belong to him, but the power which it does not belong to, Mr. A. H. Jacob, M.L.C., it is true, has given his opinion in favour of the Parliament; but, in spite of his autenities, Mr. Jacob does not count professionally and the Supreme Court would probably hold that it is a contempt of Court for him (not being a barrister—solicitor, proctor, or even a certificated conveyancer, or as some persons seem to be led to) give an opinion at all on a point of abstruse constitutional law. However, some of us who never were baptized into the true legal faith, and haven't even yet been converted to that faith, will be inclined to agree with Mr. Jacob that Messrs. Slattery and Heyden and the four barristers have only discovered a "mar's nest"—"no man's land"—a piece of ground which is not the property of anybody, altogether a mar's nest, and which is not to be taken from their clients. Some (I suppose) of the men at the Minerva told me that one of the opinions weighed just under a quarter of an ewt., and was as bulky as any three volumes of Votes and Proceedings. If this is so, it is good news for somebody.

quiring half-a-ton or so of pleadings is as good a

On the whole, though not without a little reservation caused by his manner of doing a good thing, commend Mr. J. B. Donkin's letter in Thursday's Herald to the attention of the kind-hearted and thoughtful among the men and women of that race which has driven the black fellows from their old hunting and fishing grounds, and appropriated them to the "civilized uses." But I am quite unable to see what the Board for the protection of the aborigines have been or been ordered to provoke Mr. Donkin's displeasure. Undoubtedly the Board for 1889-90 have done months ago, and so far as I am any judge, the Board laid before the public a record of good work. If their report, like some others we have been suffering from during the last year or two, had been ushered in with flourishes of trumpets and sonorous paragraphs, and had cost a few thousands to produce, Mr. Donkin I suppose would have joined in a salvo of cheer, and felt that the blacks and half-castes were in good hands. But this particular Board does its work

"Be not afraid of greatness; some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon 'em." Thus Maria to Malvolio, adding, "O thy humble slough and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; give tongue arguments against the state; praise those that hate thee; condemn those whom thou hast loved; flatter thyself without money, and thy fellows without heart." All this excellent advice was not exhausted on Malvolio. Many men who have "had greatness thrust upon 'em" have benefited by it since his time. A very recent case which happened at Dublin not many weeks ago. It was Sir Patrick Jennings and an interviewer of the Freeman's Journal. The interview was, as the journal states, "of a most interesting nature," conveying much information relative to the career of Sir Patrick Jennings, his views on some of the leading questions of the day, and especially on the condition of the Australian colonies. Sir Patrick Jennings on Sir Patrick Jennings is not only interesting, but impressive; for is it not a genuine acquisition to mankind at large to know what are the opinions of things in general, and on Sir Patrick Jennings in particular, of a gentleman who represents the highest attributes of the Celt, combined with the tranquil self-satisfied stolidity of the Dutchman. Sir Patrick has been told on good authority, is a Dutchman if anybody prefers it—a Dutchman, however, who is "not achieved greatness," and who has been born great, but hum. If anybody doubts, let him read the report in the Freeman's Journal interviewer, which is authentic autobiography on the face of it. Here is a man—senior delegate to the Imperial Conference—a K.C.B., according to the Freeman—L.L.D. of Dublin—and with many other alphabetic certificates of distinction—whose tongue has so often tangled arguments of State and has recently taken them as they come, and has recently taken them as they come back to us, and—to the State Home Office we are going to prepare for our Jennings. Are we making due preparation for his reception? We know that we can't possibly thrust any more greatness upon him? But can't we as a people thrust our gratitude upon him? Can't we give him such acknowledgment as letters so excellent a representative of people would not refuse? Would it not be known but for one week, that he had been coming back to us, and—to the State Home across the principal streets, fireworks, a thanksgiving service, a distribution of buns to the gamin, and last of all a telegram to the Queen and the Freeman's Journal. Perhaps that K.C.B. would come back as the Royal reply.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir.—I was surprised and pleased to find when visiting the Premier in Adelaide that he was attending to the fact that they must for parliamentary business at 2 o'clock p.m. I heard one short, eloquent speech from an Irish member, and then the Premier rose to speak. He said that the Parliament would study more the art of "public speaking" and give us more true eloquence and less longwinded speech that waste so much of valuable time, and cause debates to last for hours. He said that he had been told that he was evil. I know of several noble, valuable, worthy lives, members of Parliament, who have been sacrificed by the cause; he has trained by his own sittings after dinner, before late afternoon, when he is not tired, and his husband, are trained to indulge in intoxicating drinks. do with our respected and worthy Premier could have been done before the parliamentary business shall be continued after midnight.

If this is not done in England, then why should not the premier colony of New South Wales, set her noble example? I am sure that the Premier of New South Wales is one of our valuable and learned statesmen? Take for instance, our worthy Premier, Sir Henry Parkes (whose wife is a noble lady), whose valuable life may be prolonged for many years, and who is to exert more of his strength be not overtaxed with prolonged sittings after midnight.

Yours truly,

As the first stone of the promenade above-mentioned is not yet laid, it behoves everyone who likes to look at life through shop windows to make the most of the opportunities within his reach. Residence in a small country town offers but few chances for the pursuit of this engrossing occupation. Still, it affords some. The first thing to be done is to ascertain the establishments, for instance, where the highly-artistic and well-known dress-makers, members of Britain's Royal family and of the great landed aristocracy dress when they are about to visit some select club in Pall Mall, or prance throughotten flow on eccentric chargers, whose progress is more lateral than direct. Then there are famous English fashions, such as those frock coats and trousers it would be as idle to look for in the streets of London as to see a new-born infant. Mr. Gladstone, when he is in the falling tress or explaining the Homeric legend, invariably appears in a long coat and check pantaloons, hood. This is somewhat strange, as tailors, being naturally conservative, might be expected to throw ridicule on the great statesman by putting him in a Tommy Dodd's garment, such as that worn by the Duke of Devonshire, the strong liberal leanings of colonists would resent such an indignity as a personal affront, and force the tradesman who committed the outrage to withdraw the insulting representation. Occasionally, even in the smallest towns, the tailor, particularly if he studies his profession in London, shows a plate representative of the Duke of Devonshire, and a portrait of the Right Hon. Sir Charles, a work of art, this, is a

WEST MAITLAND, FRIDAY
The committee organised some months ago to raise

Massic Hall last evening to receive the reports of the deacons, secretary and hon. treasurer. The Rev. Canon Tyrrell presided and voted to the chair. There were present—The Revs. W. H. Harrington, T. D. Warner, R. E. Goddard, Messrs. C. C. Capper, James Capper, H. H. Capper, J. A. F. Brooks, H. Frenchard, J. D. Prentiss, J. A. Apollon, J. W. Smith, M. L. A., Mr. George Bromhead, and Samuel Clegg. The hon. treasurer, Mr. John Roush, reported that the total cash on hand at the present time amounted to $254.40, a discussion ensued as to whether the lists should close at once or remain open for further subscriptions. It was decided to keep the lists open for one month. The chairman thought it ought to be understood that the Bishop was not in affluent circumstances, and consequently the liabilities resulting from the prodition of the Bishop, and the expenses of the diocese, were not to be met by the diocese, but by the people like $300, and he had little, if any, pecuniary means. The amount collected so far was looked upon as a loan, and the Bishop was to be repaid when the matter was thoroughly understood the persons who the circulars had been issued would not fail to contribute. When the lists were closed the money would be cable.

BROKEN HILL, FRIDAY

A meeting was held at Reynolds' hotel last night for a Volunteer Corps. Mr. Newton occupied the chair. A De Laas was appointed hon. secretary. There were about 20 present, and great unanimity of feeling prevailed in favour of the movement. Mr. De Laas, who proposed, and Mr. Justin McCarthy, solicitor, seconded, "That 20 grants be sent to the Colonial Secretary asking permission to form a corps, and that Messrs. Abigail and Clarke be the members for the district." The motion was carried by acclamation. "This was carried unanimously, and between 20 and 40 names were given in as intending volunteers to present to the company of 100 strong can be raised, and have been raised there is no doubt that the Parkes will grant the request to form the corps."

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian writes:—Whilst one of the Jubilee banquets declined the honour, there is a better story still which I have heard of one of the Jubilee poets. He wrote an ode to the Queen, and was asked to read it at the banquet, even telling his wife, and declined it on the ground that he did not wish to be "shelved." When he imparted the information to the party, he was asked to read it at the banquet, and he communicated it to her daughters with tears and fond caresses. Strong Tory as he is, coercion was applied to him, and he was made to write to the Premier withdrawing it. He had not been laid before Her Majesty, the offer was allowed to hold good, and the member who preferred the Commons was obliged to go to the Lords because he is the victim of his own feelings.

Just 12 months ago, says an English paper, a young man named Saunders attempted to murder a woman in the streets of Huntington by stabbing her with a sword-bayonet, and that offence cost him a 15 years' penal servitude. At the time of his trial he was in a very bad way, and a painful illness of the lungs gradually grew better, but she always insisted that he should be allowed to go home, and that he should have possession of the sword-bayonet had broken off in her body, and she was allowed to go home, and she was allowed to go home. The most extraordinary thing was that the sword-bayonet was found in the wound was in the flesh, and the blade was extracted, broken and fast, from his back. It must have thus turned completely round.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE WALTHAM WATCHES are now fitted with LOGAN'S PATENT BREGUET HAIR SPRINGS, Hardened and Tempered in Form, which ensure for the Watch a most accurate and reliable action.

The patents to manufacture these Superior Breguet Hair Springs are the exclusive property of the American Waltham Watch Company and all other Patent and Breguet Hair Springs are cheap imitations, which are coiled into form after tempering, having always a tendency to change their form, and whose actions are consequently unreliable.

ANY WALTHAM WATCH CAN, IF DESIRED, BE OBTAINED IN AN ENGLISH HALL-MARKED CASE, EITHER OF GOLD OR SILVER.

The following few particulars are worth noting:—

The cornerstone of the WALTHAM WATCH is composed of 138 parts, and each of the 138 parts is made by more than 200 elaborate machines, which are marvels of ingenuity and precision. Every complete WALTHAM WATCH movement passes through 24 distinct operations in the heart of the great Waltham Watch factory, which has 317,900 square feet of floor-room, over 35 miles of work-benches, and gives employment to over 8000 hands, in the production of the great Waltham watches. Each watch requires over 200 operations, and is made in an entirely different department from the movement, but with such exactness that a watch can be taken apart and put together again by any one of corresponding grade, all parts being interchangeable.

All WALTHAM WATCHES are carefully tested and adjusted; from 100 to 1200 watches are tested every day. Over 200,000 Waltham Watches are at all times in process of manufacture.

Over 100,000,000 watches of the famous MILLION WALTHAM WATCHES have been made and distributed all over the world.

The balance-wheel of a quick-time Waltham Watch beats—

1 time in 1 second
60 times in 1 minute
3600 times in 1 hour
432,000 times in 1 day
10,800 times in 1 week
1,296,000 times in 1 month
157,080,000 times in 1 year.

And more exacting service is required of each watch than any other piece of mechanism. It must keep running without cessation or variation day and night, and under such conditions of heat and cold and vibration and in all climates, and in all seasons of the year.

hanging up, lying down, on its face or on its back, in the pocket, subject to the motion of walking, the folding of riding, and the like. It is a watch that can be worn in any position, and it will do this and give the correct time whenever consulted.

A WALTHAM WATCH is probably the cheapest article manufactured in the world. It is a watch that you can extend for life, and will do good service for over 20 years. This is only a year, or less than ONE PENNY a week.

For a full and complete record of the Exhibitions WALTHAM WATCHES have received the highest awards and acknowledgments of superiority in construction, finish, and performance. WALTHAM WATCHES are the only watches that have been awarded a medal in every class, grade and pattern, from the plainest to the highest.

GOLD WALTHEM WATCHES are now made to wind and set without a key, and are fitted with Foggy's Patent Crown-Piston, preventing the watchman, when reading, from injuring the movement.
